

Grugan the Allseeing

Jean le Bleu's Testimony

Yes, we have worked for the orcs of the Eye. I know, a decent dwarf and follower of Dieunne should not work with such foul creatures, but after all the beautiful nights at "Chez Amorax", I needed the money and Jean-Marie the Cruel, is not a money lender you like to wait....

The orcs were talking about all the time about a great treasure hidden in that ghastly mine of Banack Dûm and how this would help their master. They were referring to the book, I believe, the Liber Nexus. This book is a forbidden tome, found only in hand written copies, often annotated by past owners and sometimes it contains spells related to the Nexus. Grugan seem to be very keen on controlling the Nexus for some reason. He does not like outsiders to go in there. maybe he is looking for this... Heart, is it? ...you are talking about all the time?

Jaques de Flamme's Tale

Grugan seems to be a powerful priest or holy creature in the service of our blessed Amorax. He clearly enjoys the favour of the Master of Senses, I felt the blessings he gave his followers. Still, I believe, he is not a pleasure seeker but rather one who worships the senses as gifts to those willing to take power. Is not he blessed who has the sharpest eyes and keenest ears?

Divinatory Result

Grugan lives underground and his fortress lies in a stalatite. His orc followers live below him and serve him with utmost devotion. Peering into his inner sanctum is difficult if not impossible, for he protects it with powerful magic, possibly on a god-like level. Who knows what he looks like? However, there are indications that his physical form is one that pleases his god, proudly exhibiting the attributes of a true follower.

Dexter's Tale

Grugan is well known to.... some friend of mine, hehehehe! He is evil and twisted, a master of magic yet not one of the book, his gaze can petrify or stun and he wields pleasure as he does pain. Fear him and do not challenge him if you can reach your goals otherwise as well, hehehehe.

You want to know more? More, I do not know for my.... friend.... is unwilling to tell me more.
